Classic and Exotic Cars, Community and a Cause: 14th Annual Cruisin' for a Cure Returns to Help Save Lives

OMAHA, Neb. – The 14th Annual Nebraska Prostate Cancer Alliance Cruisin' for a Cure Omaha Car Show is returning to Centris Federal Credit Union headquarters on Sunday, September 20, at 13120 Pierce Street. The event, known as the "car show that saves men's lives," combines a showcase of classic, custom and exotic vehicles with free prostate cancer screenings for men.

Car enthusiasts can register their vehicles from 9 a.m. to noon, with the main show running from noon to 3 p.m. While there is no entry fee, donations are encouraged to support the Nebraska Prostate Cancer Alliance's mission of prostate cancer awareness, education and support.

From 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., men aged 40 and older can receive a free PSA (prostate-specific antigen) blood test for prostate cancer screening. Medical personnel from Methodist Hospital will be on-site to administer the tests, and they will mail results directly to participants.

"Every year, we're reminded that this event is about much more than cars," said Jeff Shapiro, vice president of the Nebraska Prostate Cancer Alliance Board of Directors. "It's about bringing the community together to have fun, start important conversations about men's health and provide free screenings that can make a life-changing difference. Knowing that men have discovered potential health concerns because of this event is what keeps us motivated year after year."

Since its inception in 2011, the event has provided over 1,800 free PSA tests at the show. Last year alone, 156 men were tested, and 15 were notified of elevated scores, enabling them to seek follow-up medical care. To date, 16 men have shared that because of the car show, they were diagnosed and successfully treated for prostate cancer.

Centris Federal Credit Union is proud to be the presenting sponsor for the 14th consecutive year. To date, Centris has donated over $38,000 to help fund the free PSA tests.

All proceeds from the car show directly benefit the Nebraska Prostate Cancer Alliance and its efforts to raise awareness, promote early detection and provide resources for men and families affected by prostate cancer.

About Nebraska Prostate Cancer Alliance

The Nebraska Prostate Cancer Alliance is dedicated to increasing awareness of prostate cancer, promoting early detection, and providing education and support to men and their families throughout Nebraska. Through community outreach, advocacy and free screening opportunities, the organization works to improve outcomes and save lives.
